MANHATTAN HOTEL and DINING SALOON, No. 188 Fulton, New York.—SMITH, ABBOTT, Proprietors, having purchased the business of the establishment, will now offer it to the public at a reasonable price. As we desire to attract a celebrity, we are authorized to acknowledge the general support of her numerous friends, and the public generally, for the same. Still, up-keeps the understanding of the "party" department, in which branch she has gained so great a popularity; and we feel assured that all loves her. All the reasonable luxuries will be given her, and in a manner agreeable to the taste of all. A few suites of rooms are kept ready for regular boarders, and transient lodgers. The proprietors have in course of time, made many alterations, and have added to the convenience of those who come to town in this city. Our study is to form only, but to meet the general purpose of the house, and the public generally.
